At 4am this morning they got a call about some sort of Skrammel in some sort of tower block on Bath Street.
Dead centre of the hot zone! they scuttled on over there in their CREAKY CANAVAN ESSENTIAL! Like horses wearing blinders! Wheels churning through the muck - left, right, left, right
- a CREAKY CANAVAN ESSENTIAL! Rolling through the blackout flume! Wheels settled by the gate and they all skittered out. Landlady waiting there looking like she'd freshly spewed!

Through the corridors, now - left, right, left, right - dripping from the ceiling, something - stomach bile! All that's digested gets forgotten, and his face had already been digested! "God, I'm dying!" he drooled, tongue fused to the roof of his mouth.
Careful you don't step in him! I said, careful you don't step in him!
When disembarking the CREAKY CANAVAN ESSENTIAL!
Stretched across the walls, seeping out from everywhere! Inside out, he's furniture for a sticky, humid, breathing room!
He's wallpaper for a sticky, humid, breathing room!
He's carpet for a sticky, humid, breathing room!
He's ceiling for a sticky, humid, breathing room!

Every time I look through the blinds I see those goddamn track-suit-wearing loiterers. I wouldn't half as much mind if not for their total disregard of order. And on the rare occasion they do behave in a predictable manner, they do this, as you would expect from a group of felons, to taunt me. Monday to Saturday there was only one. Presumably they intended to lul me into dumb passivity, leading me up the garden path with promises of order. Then comes the rug-pull! Sunday morning I opened the blinds to see three. I bet they were howling laughing that I fell for their shit. Well a loiterer would not appreciate Routine anyway.

Even a single loiterer has the power by means of ignorant body positioning to make a wreck of my counting. They stand in the way of the view from my window and now my litter tally has gone to blazing hell, and of course not only that but I have to count them, too. May 3rd was the bleak day I unsealed the box with my old notebooks in to scribble a new Column on every page, detailing the fact that there were no loiterers on any day from 2001-2022. I had to miss work. Well a loiterer would not know a good count if it hit him in the face.

Now whether it lies in one coffee or a miscount, I'm definitely picking up more things going on around here. The two floor-fles in the south-east corner of the bathroom that are diagonally interested by a line of dirt are covered in hairs. I felt them when I got out of the shower, ear-ear this morning, they bristle on the sole of my foot, they're shit and coarse like a scouring pad but are not green like one. When I had a proper 100 after drying off, I could also see some fillicies of whatever you may want to call pores on a bathroom tile out of which hair grow. And then I tried tallying up how many hairs there were - vergeren's. - they were Matted from when I stepped on them and on recount there seemed to be more than a fitting loiterer.

AS I was doing my breakfast count, one had a leg poked in such a way that I could not accurately assess the number of rings on the ladder propped up against the side of the pharmacy. I wrote 12, but I could not actually see a 12th ring. It was 12 yesterday. I've been thinking about it all morning. See usually I can deal with the loiterers but their numbers have been fluctuating wildly the last few weeks. I reckon a low mutt have been passed about them.

Also on your advice I've started drinking more of that coffee. It does keep me awake and I think that it even makes me more perceptive of changes in my environment. Which is pleasant, but now I'm not sure if things are changing due to a miscount, or if I'm just beginning to notice stuff I wasn't able to perceive before. I'm really not sure if there was a 14th ring on the ladder propped up against the side of the pharmacy and my litter tally could very well be off today on account of an ignorantly poisoned loiterer. Who, I think, moved a piece of gum with his shoe.

EXCURSIONS INTO THOUGHT SCIENCE

- Contributions from
Dr. Pooloof New Zealand
+
Dr. Yukon Travel Water
OF MAOUTS

Today's focus: FALLACIES

They will come fallacy
- Just because you build it, doesn't mean they will come.

Circular Saw fallacy
- Every saw must be circular.

Fat guy fallacy

- Just cos a guy's fat don't mean he eat lots.

Ointment Fallacy

- If the tube of ointment/toothpaste looks empty, don't mean a bit can't be squeezed out.

- Note: If your interlocutor commits this fallacy, counter it with the roll up technique.

Bad cancer fallacy

- Every cancer must be bad.

the Bag fallacy (advice)

- If a bag is full of marbles, don't put more marbles in it. That will make it heavier.

the William Gibson fallacy

- If a disk has foreskin, it can still cum like a horse.

Goodbye fallacy

- Goodbyes don't always have to be good or even a bye.

- Note: If your interlocutor commits this fallacy, bring up that goodbyes are not always good or even a bye and say hello.

Quick fallacy

- If you're quick you won't see the hole.

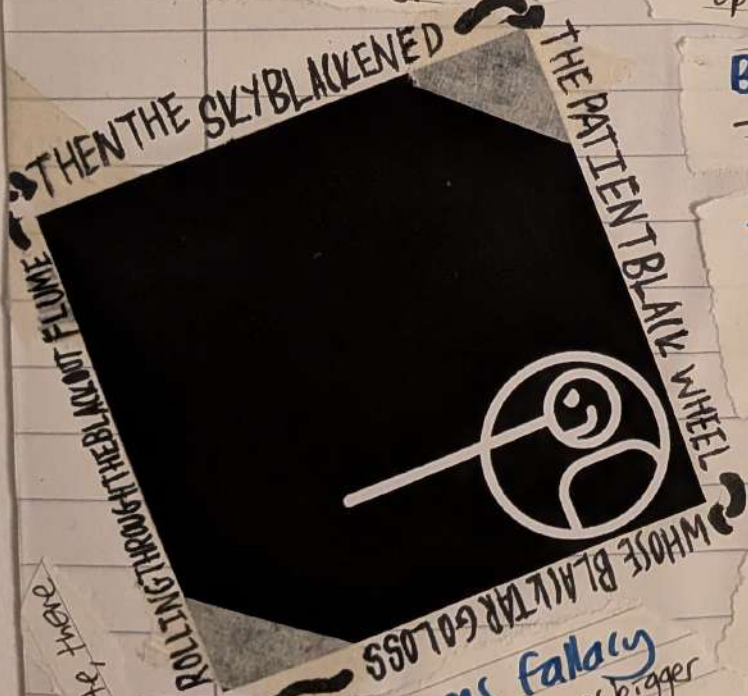

- Note: If your interlocutor unleashes this fallacy, remind them that they may not be seeing the forest for the trees.

2 Euro fallacy
- Just cos the 2 euro coin's got a big 2 on it don't mean there's a huge 2-shaped island on earth.

Big coins fallacy

- Coins are sometimes bigger than what they is actually worn e.g. 5 cent coin bigger than 10 cent coin.

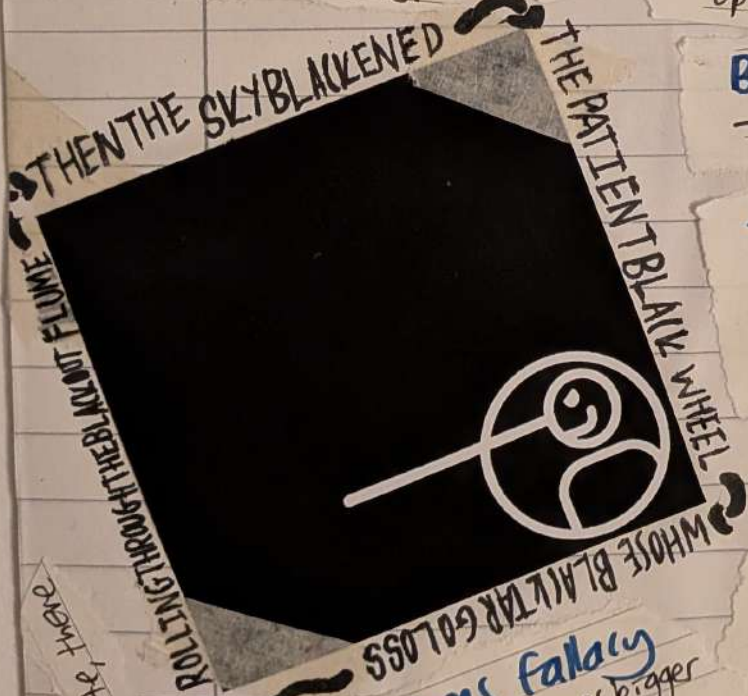

- Note: If your interlocutor tries this fallacy on you, remind them to read the number on the coin.

Big coins fallacy

- Coins are sometimes bigger than what they is actually worn e.g. 5 cent coin bigger than 10 cent coin.

- Note: If your interlocutor tries this fallacy on you, remind them to read the number on the coin.

Grey fallacy
- If there is black and white there don't have to be grey.

MAOUTS Top Students Showcase 1983 -
Longitudinous Plock

Pictured: Plock at his awards ceremony, still from home video graciously provided by Pelafina Plock, mother.

Our top performing student this year was the 23 year old Longitudinous Plock, graduating with a prestigious Honours Bachelor's degree in Thought Science. A diligent student, professors across the board have been floored with his theoretical work in development of bedframe decisions, resulting in a landslide victory for our overall Top Student category. Since his graduation in December 1983, Longitudinous has made no short effort to situate himself within the field of study immediately. Already making major strides and discoveries in thought science such as the recent discovery of a new cooling system for food named the Block Principle, we are proud to have housed a genius soul such as himself. Described by former lecturers as "overly quiet although not un-sensual during a presentation" and "just a fantastically prodigious pupil at imbibing Christmas carols into his filial tracts", he is remembered fondly. Friends talk of him as being "not offputtingly overt although his Christmas senses made me tingle" and "ten times I touched him that night, a tentative tantalizer of terrific taste". Plock is on track to join the 27 club in 1998.

MANGIAC

SCOOP!

An exclusive glimpse inside the white prisons
of MAOUTS

DURING our extended visit to MAOUTS's sprawling campus, we at MANGIAC WEHAVIOR were lucky enough to meet some of the most brilliant minds the world has to offer. We had the chance to collaborate with Drs. New Zealand and Travelwater on trailblazing Thought Science research, have a chat and little tinkle with legendary MAOUTS alumnus Longitudinous Ploch, and even obtain a never-before-seen look inside the university's world-renowned White Prisons.

Straddling H.W. Terbert memorial road, just by the northern boundary of the main campus, the White Prisons of MAOUTS (WPM) stand as an impressive monument to the progressive ideals for which the university is known. Shut off to the public and the press, not much is known about the prison's inner workings and going-ons. The MANGIAC team managed to speak to the head prison guard at WPM, G. Herbo Interrobang Jr., who, remarkably, let us take a peek inside...

Thomas Wehavior: Minneapolis legend says that the WPM is a housing complex of sorts reserved for MAOUTS's white students. That they take up accommodation here for the duration of their studies - forcibly so. To what extent is this true, and what does this - even if it is merely urban legend - say about the racial politics of the university?

G. Herbo Interrobang Jr.: Well, the second question, I'm afraid, I can't comment on that.

Wehavior: And the first?

Interrobang: I can't answer that either.

Wehavior: Why not?

Interrobang: I don't feel like it.

Wehavior: Little is publicly known about what goes on within the walls of the white prisons; nobody has been allowed a look inside, save employees and residents. Would it be possible to let our crew inside, even if briefly?

Interrobang: I don't see why not.

Inside the white prisons we saw a big prison

I WANT TO GO TO THE TREE MUSEUM

Short Story Written Reluctantly BY YOU

HOW DARE YOU LOOK AT ME?

I'm in my space observing a remarkable, uninteresting information stream remarkably.

HOW DARE YOU SPEAK TO ME? DON'T YOU SEE I'M NOT BUSY!

I'm not busy, I'm occupied - no chance in hell I want to go to a tree museum. It's already in front of me if I want it to be. The idea of green gets rained on. Rain should not touch me. Green should die, messily.

Uncurated and unmediated, inconvenient life spattered everywhere.

Absence of consciousness or consequence where life is politely unbothered is what I want.

When I lie I speak my native language. You desire but you do not have, so you kill. Untrue man supports the suffering of others. In those who harbour thoughts like these, hatred will never come to an end.

TO KILL IS TO SIN. TO ERR IS TO SIN.
TO BE IS TO SIN.

Wait, there's beer at the tree museum? Holy fucking shit.
